

John McRoberts

January 9, 1944 - March 29, 2024

John McRoberts, born, raised, and educated in the Midwest, was the oldest child of Jack and Agnes McRoberts.

John was valedictorian and the quarterback for his high school football team. Little did he know that this notoriety would attract the attention of a high school girl across town who would pursue him until she became his wife, Rose Ann.

They moved to Florida and started a family, having three children. John was very active in the church and youth programs coaching baseball teams for his sons. He was also involved in Indian Guides and Princesses. John and Rose Ann were the first members of a church, which eventually became the cathedral for the archdiocese. The family moved to Washington state where he remained a man of great faith.

John was passionate about his family, technology, sports and travel. He became a home automation expert, automating his home and the family business.

His family was number one. In addition, he was active in their daily lives going to their sporting events, concerts, and all other life milestones with camera in hand saving memories for those he loved. He worked diligently organizing and creating works of art out of these. The value of these have gone up significantly since his departure. They are very precious to the family.

His passion for his family extended to vacations with kids, and later grandkids, on road-trips seeing America's national parks and other top attractions like the world's biggest pistachio. Our best memories with him are from family trips. We remember him holding down the grandkids to keep them from blowing away while flying kites twice their size in gale force winds on the Oregon coast.

He and Rose Ann continued to give back to the community including helping build trails in their neighborhood and leading a small group that created and ran multiple, low income housing units.

He leaves behind his wife, two brothers and a sister, three kids and four grand kids, and many many friends. We are all richer for having known him. Rest in Peace John. You earned it.
