You will forever be missed in my heart.

“ Roxy, I never had a little sister, but if I could have picked one it would have been you. Your heart was second to none. If everyone was as giving and loving as you, what a world this would be. Over these these last couple of years you showed me what giving and thinking of others is all about. You knew the obstacles you faced, yet others were were your main concern. You showed strength beyond compare, yet were still a softee at heart. I love you lil' sister, and hope I can leave even a smidgeon of the impact on others as you have. Love you brat! Your adopted big brother forever, Mark

“ From panning for gems to picking wild huckleberries, from creating neat arts and crafts to canning some of the things she had grown or harvested, Roxy was always busy. She would harvest walnuts and make wood stain from the husks, she was that creative and talented. I will always remember her combination of strawberries and blueberries to make her wonderful blahberry jam. I will miss that jam but not nearly as much as I will miss my little sister until we can be together again.
I love you Roxy!
